But the pace slowed when the bill reached the House of Representatives, where four committees had jurisdiction, not one. Bush, who had lobbied for the bill with senators, was more aloof from the battle in the House. Some ADA supporters complained that Bush was seeking to have it both ways—in part not to further anger critics of the bill, particularly the small business lobby. Still, Bush's endorsement of disability rights gave the ADA a winning patina of bipartisanship, which put it on a sure track to passage. The House of Representatives voted 403–20 on May 22, 1990, for the ADA. The House and Senate then passed the final version of the bill on July 12 and July 13.
